Paletas

Paletas are a type of frozen treat that originated in Mexico. They are similar to popsicles or ice pops, but are typically made with fresh fruit and other natural ingredients, and often have a creamier texture.

Paletas are a popular dessert or snack in many Latin American countries, and can be found in specialty shops or street vendors in the United States as well.

Mochi

Mochi ice cream is a modern variation of traditional Japanese mochi, which consists of small balls of ice cream wrapped in a layer of sweet, chewy mochi dough. The mochi dough is made from glutinous rice flour, sugar, and water, which is kneaded into a smooth, pliable dough and then wrapped around a small ball of ice cream.

Mochi ice cream comes in a variety of flavors, such as green tea, strawberry, chocolate, and mango. It is often served as a dessert or snack, and can be found in many Asian grocery stores and Japanese restaurants around the world. The combination of the cold ice cream and the soft, chewy mochi dough makes for a unique and satisfying texture and taste experience.

Ice Cream bars

An ice cream bar is a frozen dessert that consists of a single serving of ice cream that is coated in a layer of chocolate, caramel, or other sweet coatings. The ice cream bar is usually served on a stick, making it easy to hold and eat.

Ice cream bars can come in a variety of flavors, such as vanilla, chocolate, strawberry, and mint chocolate chip. They can also have different types of coatings, such as hard chocolate shell or a soft caramel layer. Some ice cream bars also have additional toppings or fillings, such as nuts, sprinkles, or fudge.

Ice cream bars are a popular frozen treat, often sold in grocery stores, ice cream trucks, and at fast food restaurants. They are typically eaten during the summer months or as a dessert after a meal.
